Stowers and Heard ought to make a very capable pair of pitchers for Technical this spring. Both boys seem to have more stuff than the average high school flinger, and there is no reason why they should not win nearly every game in which they take part. Both are tall and can cut the ball across the plate with quite a little speed. Also each has a pretty good curve. Both youngsters have more than enough stuff to get away with high school contests, and it would not be a surprise to see Technical make a great fight for the championship. Stowers and Heard form a combination that ought to work well together, too, the former being a southpaw and the latter a right-hander. tory of lawn tennis in this or any other country.

when the game was abandoned.

Johnson relied solely on his speed.
Two scratch hits were charged against him and he had five strike-outs to his credit. Boshling pitched as if it were midseason. He used curves and change of pace, was not hit safely at all and also fanned four. Just what these pitchers will do when they get a chance to work under suitable conditions will be interesting to note.

that the ordinary ball players' paraphernalia is by no means warm enough for this climate. It was real cold in the afternoon yesterday and for what purpose the game was played is hard to understand. The players have reached that stage where they are growling about having to go out on the field, and so many of them are suffering from colds that when getting-up time comes in the morning there is a regular coughing concert. This place has made against Seiglie signing with Washington is by no means causing any concern to Manager Griffith or any one else. There is no more chance for Seiglie to break into the Washington line-up than there is for him to jump over the Washington Monument. Seiglie needs to learn a whole lot, and with experience he may be a fair ball player in a few years from now.

NEW YORK, March 23.—Robert D. Wrenn, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, announced last night the official list of dates and awards of championship tournaments for the season of 1915.

sanction of the governing body. Assignments have been made for 167 fixonly positions in which it is fairly sure certain men will start are first in 1914 the total was 134, the record hase, second and short. Oberlin, who used to play at Central, and Dearstyne and Knode, who held down the last two positions in 1914, will be used in those. It is hard to tell who will do the pitching, none of the hurlers being in very good shape.

The Georgetown University squad left this morning for Athens. Ga.. where it is to play games tomorrow and Thursday with the University of Georgia. The Blue and Gray is scheduled to meet the Georgia Institute of Technology Friday and Saturday at Atlanta.

There is another game scheduled with Virginia for Wednesday, but unless the weather is warmer than it was yester-day it will be called off. Weather conday it will be called off. Weather conditions here are remarkable. Yesterday morning, for instance, it was balmy, though the sun did not break through the mist and clouds until afternoon. It was clear and bright in the afternoon, but so cold that real base ball was out of the question. Similar conditions have prevailed ever since the team has been here, and, while there has been a promise of real spring weather from time to time, the fact of the matter is the players really have been compelled to do nearly all their work in weather which is more like that which one finds in the middle of winter.

The development of John Henry into a much better hitter than he ever was before will mean much to the team. Henry has taught himself the art of Henry has taught himself the art of hitting to right field and he is clever at it. Most of his drives are close to the bag and are not grounders but line drives which would be sure to go safe. Once in a great while Henry pulls the ball into left. Griffith looks for Henry to hit forty or fifty points better than he ever did before and if this expectation is realized the Nationals are sure to average more runs per game than they have formerly.

Sieglie looked much better in the morning game yesterday. He seemed to be over his nervous spell and, besides getting a hit the first time up which produced a run, handled himself well at the plate.

Now that Jim Shaw is allowed to use his curve the hits off his delivery have become decidedly scarce. While Jim was using nothing but his speed he was easy picking for the batters, but his arm has advanced sufficiently now for him to use everything he has at his command, and the result is that he is once more as effective as he was in many of his games last season. There is no reason why Shaw should not be one of the team's winning pitchers next season. He now has had enough experience to work with intelligence, and that is all that has ever been lacking in his work. Shaw has the size, and just ab much stuff as most pitchers with good arms, and he is still a very young fellow.

The greatest handicap the players encounter in their batting, with this cold weather prevailing, is the fact that unless they hit the ball squarely the bat stings their hands enough to cause them much pain, and they naturally do not go up to the plate with as much eagerness, nor do they relish the batting practice as much as is generally the case. There are some very uncomplimentary things said about the weather every time a player hits the ball and hurts his hands.

The Nationals scored in every inning but one against Virginia yesterday. In the first Moeller tallied after opening with a double. He took third on Foster's out and scored on Acosta's long sacrifice fly.

McBride's single, Ainsmith being hit by a pitched ball, and Johnson's screeching single, which got away from the left fielder, sent McBride over in the second. Singles by Foster and Acosta, Gandil being hit by the pitcher, and Shanks' high double to right gave them two more runs in the third. Ainsmith's hit and steal, followed by a muff of a thrown ball at the plate, brought the speedy catcher home in the fourth, and the final run came in the sixth, when Boehling singled and Brown brought him home with a three-base wallop to left center. rivals will follow his example.

The coming visit to this country will be Vardon's third. He came here first in 1900, and won the national open championship over the course of the Chicago Golf Club at Wheaton, Ill. With Edward Ray as a companion, he came over again in 1913, and after trying with Ray and Francis Oulmet for the national open title at Brookline finished second to the young Boston amateur in the famous three-cornered play-off. Vardon is the only man who has won the British open championship six times. He is the present holder of the title, and also won it in 1896, 1898, 1899, 1903 and 1911.
